Media literacy is the ability to identify different types of media and understand the messages they're sending.

English for media literacy will help you improve your language skills and your knowledge of the media at the same time.

This course is for those who…

… read a newspaper or follow the news online;

… watch TV or listen to the radio;

… enjoy using social media;

… like writing blog posts.

We will discuss a lot of questions.
Among them:

Which media sources do you use most frequently?

How often do you use social media (such as Facebook)?

How often do you comment on someone's post?

We will learn how...

- to think critically while using media
- to become a smart consumer of products and information
- to compare and contrast traditional and social media
- to analyze media messages
- to navigate safely through messages
- to write awesome blog posts

Media literacy encourages students to question, evaluate and understand their multimedia culture.
It teaches them to become active media consumers and users.

Media literacy is one of the most necessary skills nowadays.
